

the correction of past errors. As Prof. Miller, who has of course due regard for philological proprieties, well says: "We may recognize the law of priority as absolute, and retain the many monstrous and misspelled names to be found on the records of natural history, just as their makers left them. They are historic facts and serve to mark the group of animals or plants to which they apply, but these misshapen forms of words are not ornamental and they are unworthy of scholars. It is to be hoped that, in future, greater care may be taken to make words that give correctly the idea the author may have intended. . . . It costs no more to frame a name properly than to leave it a monstrosity."—J. A. A.

Chapman's Notes on Birds Observed in Yucatan.<sup>1</sup>—In the present paper Mr. Chapman gives the ornithological results of his short excursion to Yucatan, where, in March, 1896, he spent about three weeks at Chichen-Itza in the study of bird-life. Seventy-four species were observed, a list of which, together with critical notes and remarks on habits, are here given, preceded by a short sketch of the physical features of the region and the derivation of its avifauna.

A new genus, Agriocharis (p. 288), is created for the reception of the Ocellated Turkey; and an attempt is made to prove the Guatemalan Green Jay specifically distinct from the Rio Grande bird. With the latter we are unable to agree.

A very useful list of the principal contributions to Yucatan birds concludes the paper. — C. W. R.

'Upon the Tree-Tops.'<sup>2</sup>—Students of birds out of doors will welcome a new volume by Mrs. Miller. Her enthusiastic and careful observations of the home-life of birds have not only added to our knowledge of the habits of species whose ways we supposed were well known, but they have shown how much there is in bird-life to interest every stroller in the woods and fields. It is the human-like nature of birds that appeals to Mrs. Miller and in writing from this point of view she brings birds nearer to us and arouses a sympathetic interest in them even among readers to whom her feathered friends are strangers.

In the present volume we have accounts of the Loggerhead Shrike, Winter Wren, Yellow-breasted Chat, Ruby-throated Hummingbird, and more or less extended observations on numerous other birds in chapters entitled, 'Tramps with an Enthusiast,' 'Young America in Feathers,' 'Down the Meadow,' 'In a Colorado Nook,' and 'The Idyl of an Empty
